TAKING A STAND • Richard Lamontagne and Nicole Jennieux gathered support from 64 residents who believe the mill rate for high-density housing should be lower than single-family dwellings. A petition was brought before council last week.

Mill rate: 'too high and unfair'

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

Condominium owners in Didsbury are petitioning council to lower the mill rate for apartment and townhouse style condominiums, saying it's too high and unfair.

Sixty-four people living in Campus Green, Westview Greens and Sunset Condominiums signed a petition late October and it was brought before council last Tuesday.

"We use far less town infrastructure and services," Richard Lamontagne, chairperson for Campus Green Condominiums told the Review. "Why should we pay the same as single-family dwellings?"

Lamontagne argues Campus Green has 24 units with 175 feet of street with no lanes while 24 single-family dwellings require 600 feet of street frontage and possibly 600 feet of lane access. As well, he said the town provides maintenance service for 24 sewer and water services for single-family dwellings, not one as in the case of the condominium.

"These places are nothing more than cash cows for the town," he said. Currently the mill rate is split between residential and commercial. Lamontagne wants council to change the mill rate to follow models used in other municipalities where residential is broken into subsections to separate high-density housing from single-family dwellings.

The mill rate was set at 9.9381 this year, 2.3901 per cent of that going towards education and senior services. Lamontagne wants to see the municipal tax rate of 7.5480 go down.

Lamontagne doesn't know the average amount of taxes paid by Campus Green last year but said he paid $2,127 for his 1200 foot condo and believes his neighbours paid close to the same.

"That's close to $48,000 from us, and I guarantee you wouldn't generate that from single family homes," he said.

"These places are nothing more than cash cows for the town."

LAMONTAGNE

This isn't the first time council has been approached about the issue. DCM Homes appealed to council in July after learning property tax for the newly built Brownstones project would be as much as a single-family dwelling. Both Dana Munn, owner of DCM and Jeremy Fazakas with Pinnacle Contracting told the Review in August, they plan to back off multi-family projects if the town doesn't create a new tax rate for town homes.

"It's going to be a struggle because if we do (lower the mill rate), it's going to be a loss of tax revenue," said mayor Brian Wittal. "How do you balance that? ... Does that get thrown back into the pot and absorbed by all the others that are residential and or commercial ... are people going to be willing to accept that?"

The petition was brought before council on Tuesday night and some councillors suggested condo owners were already paying fewer taxes because the assessed value of their dwelling would be lower than a house.

"They're getting charged less on their mill rate because instead of paying $400,000 for a house they're paying $200,000 for a condo. So in fact they're paying half the taxes on that house anyway," said councillor Ray Anderson.

Calgary man charged with murder in Texas Mickey hit-and-run

BY LEA SMALDON
Review Staff

A 24 year-old Calgary man charged with murdering an Olds College student and injuring others outside the Texas Mickey bar early last Friday morning in a hit-and-run will appear in Didsbury Provincial Court Wednesday.

Olds RCMP charged Jeffrey Kevin Leinen on Saturday with first degree murder of Olds College student Nicholas Baier, dangerous driving causing death, impaired driving causing death, dangerous driving causing bodily harm and dangerous driving causing bodily harm.

As of yesterday, he remained in custody since being apprehended minutes after a Ford truck drove into a crowd of people standing outside the uptown Olds bar around 12:20 a.m. Friday morning, killing Baier and injuring others.

Texas Mickey staff say video surveillance from outside the bar that night backs witness statements that a man was escorted out of the bar by bouncers, returned to the front of the bar in his truck, stopped and idled for about 45 seconds, accelerated and veered into a crowd gathered on the sidewalk.

"That's the worst accident I've seen in the bar business - just the senselessness, the brutality of what the guy did. The fact that he actually stopped his vehicle and thought about it kind makes you wonder why," said Peter Giles, a Texas Mickey doorman who witnessed the incident.

"What was going through my mind was 'are these people going to live through this?'" said the 18-year veteran of the bar business.

Baier, an Olds College agriculture management student living on campus, was pronounced dead at the Olds hospital after being struck by the truck. A seriously injured 19 year-old college student was taken to Olds hospital as well, was treated and then released. Two others received minor injuries.

Giles and his fellow doormen had escorted a blond haired, tattoo-riddled man with a Mohawk hairstyle out of the bar for fighting minutes before the tragedy.

The Calgary man had begun the evening at Texas Mickey around 9 p.m. that night saying he and another man were up from Calgary to celebrate two girls' birthdays.

At that time, staff said he asked where the party was, and then left for a while after being told the bar didn't get busy until 10:30 or 11.

He returned to the bar around 10:20 p.m. Later in the evening, wheelchair bound Olds College student Cody Davis told bar owner Jen Casavant that a shirtless bar patron was causing trouble.

Casavant, who was bartending at the time, said she told him to get a doorman to deal with it.

"But then I hear that he was beating up this guy in a wheelchair to a point where he knocked him right out of his chair. Terrible hey?"

The patron also punched the bartender's assistant that came to intervene in the fight.

Doormen escorted the unruly bar patron outside.

"He was fighting with us as we brought him out. He was running his mouth, the usual stuff that people say when we throw them out of the bar. I don't recall him threatening or anything like that but he didn't want to leave," Giles said.

After convincing the man to exit the premise and a crowd that was following him to go back to the bar, Giles said he watched the man walk towards the southern part of the parking lot.

Video surveillance shows that about seven minutes later, a Ford truck pulls around to the front of bar heading east, say staff. The video also shows the truck veering into the crowd.

Olds RCMP Staff Sgt. Kevin Morton said there is no evidence to suggest the suspect did not see the crowd of people.

"This was a deliberate act. He was going forward, he saw them, he drove into them. I'm confident in that. There is no reason to expect that he did not know there were people there."

The F250 truck did not stop after striking the pedestrians, say witnesses.

An RCMP member who was patrolling the area saw the incident and began following the vehicle while EMS was contacted and attended the scene.

The RCMP member followed the suspect, trying to identify the vehicle and eventually turned on his emergency equipment behind the arena. The suspect vehicle manoeuvred around him and left, said Morton.

The RCMP member followed the truck back to 50th Ave., south down 54 St. where they then headed west.

"Our member recognizes with the speed they're starting to get to and the heavy, heavy fog, that this is hazardous and shuts down the pursuit," Morton said, adding he is unable to say what speeds reached.

Another member joined the search and moments later RCMP came across the vehicle down from Deer Meadow School, rolled on its side, with the suspect who's now in custody, climbing out, Morton said.

The pursuit lasted two minutes or less, he said.

Meanwhile, back at the bar, bar manager David Dux describes the scene as chaos.

"I've never seen anything like it. I surely pray to God I never see anything like it gain. There were girls crying. It was a nightmare," said Dux who has worked at the bar for four and a half years.

The bar's owner said when she got outside to find out what was going on, she'd never seen so much blood in her life.

"I couldn't believe what I was seeing. When I went out there it was just a bloodbath. It was something I had never seen in my whole life and something I hope I never experience again," said Casavant.

Bystanders tried to help the wounded as paramedics arrived.

College students paid tribute to Baier by dropping off flowers at a makeshift memorial on the steps of Texas Mickey Friday.

Casavant and her staff also created a memorial inside the bar Friday night and had a signing book available for people to write their thoughts down.

"My heart goes out to his family, him, 18 years old losing his life, and the students, and I have a lot of students that work for me too," said Casavant.

"Assessment and mill rates are two separate things," protests Lamontagne.

"Assessments can't be changed. An assessment reflects what a property will sell for. A mill rate reflects density." He said condos use less heat, produce less waste and don't take up the space a home does and therefore shouldn't pay the same taxes as someone in a single-family dwelling. Council didn't make any decisions on Tuesday instead deciding it's a topic that needs more discussion. They agreed to look at the issue and talk about it further during the council retreat this week.

"Back when communities were small there were only houses and businesses. ... We're at a point where this is something we have to address," said Wittal. If down the road we want to entice more dense development as far as residential we might have to look at something like part of this incentive to do that. Both for the developers and the people who want to buy it."

Lamontagne said condo owners hope council makes a decision before the 2011 mill rate is struck.

"We're hoping council will look at this now, not wait three years when all of this will be forgotten," he said.

New sewer option proposed

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

The sewage lagoon issue is not a new one in town, but it's one that needs to be dealt with quickly, said mayor Brian Wittal.

"Council decided five years ago we'd have to make a decision in the near future but now we're only down to two or three years," said Wittal of the lagoon's capacity for 5,000 people. Currently the town sits at a population of about 4,700.

In the past couple of years council has been looking for ways to manage effluent and looked into the option of a continuous-flow mechanical plant over a year ago.

Alberta Environment denied grants for saying the technology is too expensive and too new.

"We've stepped away from that and said, 'well in the short run are there ways we can help reduce the volumes of water that is going through our system?'"

Wittal and town administration met with a private company two weeks ago to discuss the possibility of aeration process for the current lagoon.

Aeration is a process of pumping air into lagoons to increase the biological breakdown and allow it to happen quicker, he explained.

"We still have the hurdle of will Alberta Environment allow us to do more than one release a year. If not our biggest issue is still trying to store our capacity. By pushing it through doesn't help any it just fills up the back quicker."

Wittal said benefits to aeration is the possible reduction of smell as well the evaporation of more water.

"With the bubbling it makes more of the water evaporate and takes volume out of the system as opposed to regular absorption or evaporation." Engineers are reviewing the process and administration sent a letter to the Minister of Environment to see if this is something Alberta Environment or Infrastructure would support.

Wittal said the town hasn't overlooked the possibility of brining in a private industry to build and operate a sewage treatment and said town plans to talk with other companies in the coming months.

"In the next couple of years a decision will have to be made. It's that or stop development beyond the point where you're at now until such time you can do whatever upgrades you need or bring somebody else in."

Tyke 2 Ramblers

by Shelley Nichols

Small bundles of talent emerge this year in Didsbury Minor Hockey Association's Tyke level teams. The Tyke 2 Rambler gang is certainly no exception.

With no less than four returning players, including #14 Ryley Lodermeier, #11 Drake May, #7 Natalie Heinz, and #8 Anna Bischke, we are sure to make a great showing this season. Rounding out the team roster we are introducing #10 Anthony Sayer, #9 Caden Miller, #15 Carter Campbell, #4 Henry Bommarito, #16 Reid Nichols, and #5 Teagan Walker.

Molding these young players into the hockey superstars of tomorrow are Coach Darren Nichols, Assistant Coaches Graham Sayer, Ryan Lodermeier, and Cam Campbell, and Co-Managers Stacey Lodermeier and Lisa Bischke.

So far this year we have three tournaments to look forward to, and plenty of exhibition and season games to come out and watch.

This is just the beginning. The most amazing part will be seeing the improvement that comes with each step out onto the ice as these young players gain stability, experience, and skill. Everyone involved with the Tyke 2 Rambler team, the players, the staff, and the parents alike, are looking forward to a fun-filled and exciting season. It certainly will be fun to watch!

Witnesses asked to come forward to aid in investigation

BY LEA SMMALDON
Review Staff

RCMP are looking for the public's help in their investigation of last Friday morning's fatal hit-and-run outside the Texas Mickey.

Anyone with information about the suspect or the truck used to plow down a group of unsuspecting patrons is urged to contact them.

"One of the things that is extremely challenging here is simply the size of the investigation," said Olds RCMP Staff Sgt. Kevin Morton.

The night of the hit and run was one of Texas

Mickey's busiest nights - the bar caters to the college crowd on Thursdays and it also marked a Halloween Howler party.

"Well I have no idea what their licence allows but I wouldn't be surprised if they can have well over 100 people in there. I mean potentially that means we have well over 100 witnesses because it would have been a big night."

Morton said everybody in the bar that night has the potential to have seen something that was potentially the pre-cursor to this event.

"And certainly a large portion of them had certainly been involved in the follow up to this event and the actual people - we've figured there was roughly a dozen people in the parking lot during the event," Morton said.

A lot of resources have been infused into the investigation, he said.

Both Sundre and Didsbury detachments aided Olds RCMP in the aftermath of the suspect apprehension. Red Deer RCMP Major Crimes and Forensic Identification Unit and Traffic Sections are continuing to help investigate.

RCMP arrested a suspect in the case minutes after the incident and retained him in custody until yesterday's court appearance in Calgary Provincial Court.

Bar staff say RCMP took statements from people at the bar the night of the hit-and-run and also seized the video surveillance tape showing what witnesses describe as a horrific event.

Morton and the Olds College vice-president of academics presided over a student assembly Friday at noon where he asked students to come forward with information.

On Friday night, police continued their investigation inside the bar.

Transportation options discussed

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

The Tri-Transportation Project organization met in Carstairs and Didsbury last week to see how much support and interest there was from the communities.

In Carstairs, 24 people turned up and in Didsbury, seven, to learn more about the groups' idea of connecting service between Carstairs, Cremona and Didsbury.

"We need to fill the gap in transportation in our working area," said Carstairs FCSS director Robbin Bowman to the crowd.

The FCSS in Didsbury, Cremona and Carstairs are working with Mental Health workers, and Rockyview Regional Handy-Bus Society to get the project running.

They explained in Cremona there is a volunteer driving program but it consists of one driver. In Carstairs the drivers can't keep up with the number of calls coming as far as Cremona and Crossfield. In Didsbury, a volunteer driving list has dwindled over the years into non-existence. There is a handibus offered by the Lions but club members say it's draining their resources. Senior support offers rides but the Tri-Transportation program wants to be able to service a wide variety of ages.

They hope by working together the program will draw more riders and funding and be able to sustain the project into the future.

"We have a bus that sits idle two days a week," said Lions club Ray Lea at the meeting Thursday night.

He said the Lions handibus is a significant drain on the club with a large portion of their funds going towards the upkeep and maintenance of the bus, as well as fuel, insurance and the cost to pay drivers.

In recent months the club has been evaluating the longevity of the eight-passenger bus that shuttles people to appointments within Didsbury. Lions say few people use it.

Lea said Lions would consider sharing resources with the Tri-Transportation Project.

"We have access to grants through the Lions and could help out with this project," he said. "We don't want to see this operation go down."

Some residents at the meeting had concerns the handibus will eliminate services offered by the Lion's and volunteer driving programs that offer door to door service and in some cases a volunteer that waits with people during their appointments. The Tri-Transportation Project wouldn't include attendants to wait with people during appointments or help them up to the office but it will allow passengers to bring an attendant with them at no cost.

"In most cases someone needing assistance is going to choose the senior driving program over the handibus," said Paul Siller manager of Rockyview Regional Handy-Bus Society.

He said the bus offers services that differ from what's already offered in the area. The bus is meant to shuttle people to medical and mental health appointments within the area, and bus as far as Airdrie and Calgary explained Bowman. It's also available for families or individuals needing to go to the food bank, single mothers taking children to hospital appoint, or even someone looking to get around, she said.

"We want to include as many people as possible to keep the service going." The estimated cost for the service is $60,000 annually. The group has received $5,000 in donations so far. Rockyview Handy-Bus Service is offering to provide a satellite operation in the area for the first two years.

Prices for bus fare will depend on how much funding the organization can gather but projections range between $18 and $29 for a trip from Didsbury to Calgary.

The start date is pending funding but organizers say it could be as early as January. The service would run three days a week.

Poppy sales beginning

BY LEA SMMALDON
Review Staff

Poppy sales are expected to begin this week as a reminder of the sacrifice veterans gave during war times and a much needed fundraiser for local legions to support their members.

Last year, the Carstairs Royal Canadian Legion Branch 53 raised approximately $7,000 from the sale of poppies in Carstairs and Didsbury.

Legion treasurer Bev Stevenson said that while the legion is restricted in where poppy sale proceeds can be used, it can benefit local endeavours.

"Well, if we have a local veteran - and it could be a young veteran - looking for money because they don't have the resources to pay for something they need, like prescription drugs, things like that, then we can use money from our poppy fund," she said.

In the last year, some of the funds were used to buy a Calgary hospital pass which can be signed out by veterans and members.

"We've had members that have had gravely ill family members that they've had to go in and see or a family member going through a major operation and they've had to spend a lot of time at these hospitals. That gets really expensive."

The legion donated $2,500 of the poppy sales to the Rosebud Foundation last year towards the purchase of a patient lift "because we felt our local vets would be going to the Didsbury hospital first," she said.

Some of the poppy sale proceeds was donated to the Outward Bound program which provides an opportunity for post deployment veterans to share their experience in a supportive environment while on an outdoor expedition.

The Colonel Belcher hospital, the veterans' food bank and the Olds and Didsbury cadet groups also received funds.

"We also always have an emergency fund of $1,000 for Carstairs and $1,000 for Didsbury so if I got a phone call from a vet in need, I could pay out an emergency amount to help them out," she said.

Poppy sales are expected to start as early as Friday locally, if all the logistics are ironed out.

"We just have to rely on whatever people can do to help because there's less than 10 people that do everything in the whole legion," said Stevenson.

"It would be nice if businesses could be ready for us to be looking for donations so we don't have to spend so much time pounding the pavement and asking," she said.

Veteran Bill Jepps brought poppies to 34 stores last week.

Editorial Family violence has no place in good communities

DAN SINGLETON

November is Family Violence Prevention Month in Alberta, a time set aside to highlight a societal problem that, sadly, continues to plague far too many Alberta communities, harming far too many residents of all ages 12 months of the year.

Yet as with other crimes, experience has shown that domestic violence can be successfully combated through the day-to-day involvement of ordinary citizens, exposing the perpetrators to legal scrutiny and ensuring the victims receive the help and compassion they deserve.

By highlighting the cost of family violence and giving people the tools to address it, Family Violence Prevention Month is certainly one of the most important yearly public awareness efforts undertaken in Alberta.

As such, West Central Alberta residents are encouraged to take the time this month to learn more about domestic violence and to make themselves aware of how they can help end it.

"Far too many of Alberta's children, youth and families are exposed to violence," said Yvonne Fritz, Minister of Children and Youth Services. "This has powerful and profound consequences on their lives. Alberta is fortunate to have many caring community organizations dedicated to helping individuals and families live free from violence."

Alberta Health says family violence abuse is a pattern of controlling behavior that can be physical, verbal, psychological, sexual, financial, emotional or any combination thereof. It typically involves the abuser using various tactics to try to get their way and to exercise power over the victim or victims.

This year the province is offering the following advice and suggestions for anyone wishing to do their part in stopping domestic violence and helping the victims:

- Help a local shelter or sexual abuse assault centre as a volunteer, board member or fundraiser;
- Ask local businesses to display family violence information in their stores;
- Encourage the local library to carry magazines and books about family violence prevention;
- Submit regular articles or letters to the editor about family violence to the local newspaper;
- Ask the local health clinic to provide information in waiting areas and examining rooms about family violence, including information on elder abuse;
- Collect toys, books and toiletry items from your neighbours and donate them to local youth, seniors or women's shelters.

"Family violence touches every community across the province, transcending socio-economic status, education and abilities," said Minister Fritz.

Thankfully ordinary citizens, including in each and every community in West Central Alberta, have the power to help individuals and families live their lives free of domestic violence.

If you know someone who is being victimized in a domestic violence situation, call 911.

Commentary Khadr saga far from over

With today's guilty pleas in a courtroom in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba and persistent rumours from knowledgeable sources in both the Canadian and American media that a plea deal is in the works, it appears Omar Khadr will eventually return to Canada. The next question requiring the most scrutiny is what do we do with him?

As the only Western detainee left at Guantanamo Bay, as well as the fact he was arrested at the age of 15, Khadr's military commission trial was under heavy international scrutiny and will continue to be in the coming days, despite Monday's events. Now 24, after a summer in which he reportedly rejected more than one plea deal to avoid a trial, Khadr entered guilty pleas to charges of murder in violation of the laws of war, attempted murder in violation of the laws of war, conspiracy, two counts of providing material support for terrorism and spying in the United States.

The sentencing hearing will go ahead this week despite repeated media reports — many of which speak with a certain finality — that both Washington and Ottawa have reached a deal that will see Khadr sentenced to eight years in prison, one year of which would spent in Guantanamo. Afterwards, he would be allowed to apply to serve the duration of his sentence in Canada. The only scenario in which the plea deal would not be accepted is if the military jury imposes a lesser sentence.

It is the end of a disgraceful affair, both for the U.S. and Canadian governments, especially Stephen Harper. Despite his age, Khadr was never deemed a child soldier, was interrogated without counsel by CSIS agents, which shared the information with his American captors, was allegedly tortured and treated inhumanely and never received the support of his government, even in the face of a Supreme Court of Canada decision ruling his charter rights had been breached. Harper, even as Khadr pleaded guilty Monday, has refused any kind of aid to a man once described in a government summary as a "thoroughly screwed-up young man."

Harper has fought to keep Khadr out of Canada, but is now faced with the very likely prospect he will soon return. The question becomes, then what? Immediately the terms of Khadr's sentence will have to be ironed out, as parole eligibility in Canada is much more lenient than in the U.S. But will the government reintroduce Khadr back into society once his jail term, however long it turns out to be, expires?

Khadr's immediate family is one of Canada's most notorious. His father Ahmed, once considered one of Osama Bin Laden's lieutenants, is dead, killed in an airstrike in Pakistan. One of his brothers caught in the same attack is paralyzed. Another brother has been imprisoned and interrogated, while yet another has cut all ties with the family and his sister was detained at an airport and searched because of her affiliations. There is little in the way of a stable home life Khadr can look forward to, considering he has spent one-third of his life in jail.

It is in Khadr's, the government's and the public's best interests to ensure he has access to the most comprehensive rehabilitation plan possible when repatriated. He will be in his thirties by the time he is released, but between his family and Guantanamo, has seldom tasted actual freedom. He will need intensive counselling and therapy while in prison to prepare him for the day he is finally freed. He has waited a long time to come home. It is in everyone's best interests that he makes the most of it.

Truck broken into

Last Monday between midnight and 7 a.m. the next morning a F150 truck on Mountain View Gate in Carstairs was broken into. A GPS unit, satellite radio and sunglasses were stolen as well as a jacket. The estimated value of losses total $1,500. Police say the owner of the vehicle is pretty sure the door was left unlocked. No signs of forced entry was noticed.

Open garages robbed

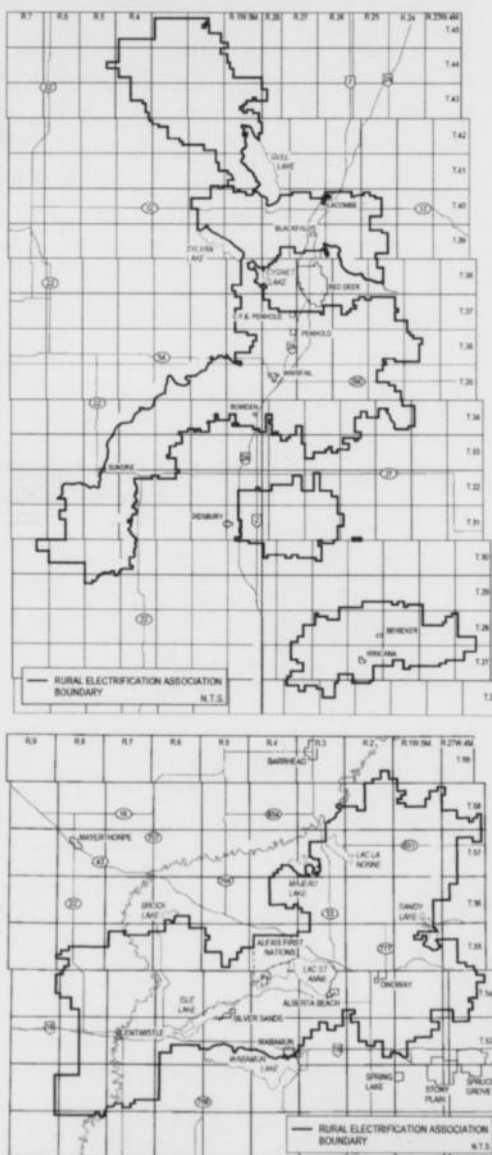

Two garages on Miltford Lane in Carstairs were broken into last Monday night leaving police to believe they were related. "A number of garages were left opened and somebody entered into them," said Jacobson. A variety of items were reported stolen from both places. One owner lost their garage door opener and a set of keys. At the other location, a gold ring and change. A vehicle in the driveway was also rummaged through with cash and cell phone taken. Police remind people to be wary of leaving doors unlocked when they have a garage door opener inside.

Lock doors when warming vehicles

Police are reminding residents to lock their car doors when warming their vehicles in the early morning hours. "It becomes a crime of opportunity, with easier targets," said Sgt. Jeff Jacobson. Last year police heard several reports of stolen vehicles after people turned their car on to warm up and went back inside to wait.

Cars tampered

A vehicle tire was slashed sometime between the evening of October 19th and the next morning in Didsbury in the 2100 block of 12 Avenue. The tire is valued at $350. There are no witnesses at this time. The ignition of a Ford F350 was damaged last week in Carstairs along Meadow Park Lane. Police said it looks like someone used a screwdriver in an attempt to steal the vehicle but only resulted in damage.

Investigation

By Saturday, the autopsy of the victim was completed by the Medical Examiner's Office, providing the investigators with a positive identification and a determination that the cause of death was as a result of blunt force trauma.

Police charged 24 year-old Jeffrey Kevin Leinen with several criminal offences in the death of Nicholas Baier of Altario, Alta., and the injury to three others run down by the F250. Several other charges were under consideration at the time on Saturday.

"What's laid will be in consultation with our investigative partners and specialists in criminal traffic law," said Morton before the charges were sworn.

Morton said the investigation is going to be a slow process.

Dragons end season

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

Didsbury Dragons' didn't win the championships this year, losing to Hanna 35-27 Saturday.

"We're disappointed," said coach Mark Lefebvre. "We felt we could have beaten Hanna, even in that game."

Lefebvre said the Hawks started the game strong with a 28 point lead but Dragons battled hard to match their score, losing to a few final plays at the end.

"It basically turned out a running game for them versus our playing game." This is the second year in a row Dragons haven't won the league championship game. Last year Dragons lost the semi final game, missing the opportunity to play in the championships. Getting to play this weekend was the team's goal and the coach said he's happy with the season overall.

"I think for the four seasons this is the best team we've ever fielded," he said. "We had some good players. We didn't beat Hanna but we were pretty close."

The team is saying goodbye to five students graduating this year and Lefebvre said the team has three solid running backs ready to go next year but is looking for a starting quarterback.

"There'll be a spring camp in May or early June for all the teams to set up for the season," he said. The camp is open to students Grade 11 and down and will be hosted in Didsbury.

Didsbury hosts playoffs

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

Didsbury Dragons senior boys are leading the division in volleyball this year. Didsbury High athletic coach Ian Bates said senior boys haven't lost a game this season yet.

"They're having a really good season and will compete in playoffs Wednesday," said Bates.

The playoffs will be in Didsbury starting 5:30 p.m. with top four schools competing. Didsbury will go up against Cremona and if they win play again to hold top spot in the division.

"The girls narrowly missed out," said Bates of the senior girls Dragons. The team played Carstairs and Cremona last Wednesday and Bates said had they won, either team would be competing in playoffs this week.

The girls won the first round against Carstairs Kodiaks last week 27-25 but dropped 21-25 then 22-25 in the next two taking them from the division playoffs.

"They'll both compete in the regional the following week," said Bates where teams will be vying for zones. Top eight heads to zones and the winners go on from there to play provincials. Regionals start November 8 but location is yet to be determined.
